

HEIR WOULDN'T GO TO IRELAND

DEMENTED INHERITOR OF $30,000 MAKES FUSS IN BROADWAY.

Halks at the Door of the Fifth Avenue Hotel on His Way With Two Lawyers to Catch the Campana—Lands in Bellevue Hospital and Misses the Boat.

Walter Johnson of San Francisco, an old man who was declared mentally incompetent by a California court, did not sail yesterday on the Campana, although his passage was booked and he is wanted in Ireland as the sole heir to a fortune of $30,000. John Johnson, who was sailed with his guardian, Elliott R. Davis, a San Francisco lawyer, and M. O'Keefe Crowley, a Dublin barrister.

Mr. Crowley came to this country to get Johnson and to make sure he was the rightful heir. It was Johnson's sister who left the money. When she died some months ago it was supposed she left no heirs. She lived in Dublin and was a woman of respectability. Among her papers were several communications from her brother, across which the woman had marked "Deceased." The Crown was about to take possession of her property, when the woman's attorney learned that her brother was still living. They began a search for him, and found him in San Francisco, where he had been committed to an asylum two years ago. Johnson was a tin roofer by trade and had little money when he was sent to the asylum. When it was found that he was entitled to his sister's property in Ireland, Lawyer Davis was appointed his guardian.

From San Francisco everything was arranged for Johnson to go abroad and claim his money. Passage for himself, his guardian and the Dublin solicitor was obtained on the Campana, and they left San Francisco in time to get here for the sailing of the steamer yesterday. The trio arrived here on Friday night and put up at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. Johnson seemed to understand where he was bound for when he left San Francisco, and he had a pleasant trip across the continent. The two lawyers didn't have the least trouble with him, and didn't anticipate any trouble. They arranged to leave the Fifth Avenue Hotel at 11 o'clock yesterday to get to the dock of the steamer in ample time for the sailing hour at noon. The two lawyers and their charge settled their accounts at the hotel and left by the Twenty-third street entrance. Just outside the hotel Johnson balked.

"Where are we going now?" he asked. "Why, we're going to Ireland to get the money," said his guardian.

"Ireland," said the old man, "am I going to Ireland?"

"You certainly are," chorused the two lawyers.

"I'm not," said the old man, stubbornly.

The lawyers coaxed him and tried to treat him to accompany them. They showed him the steamer tickets and explained to him again why he was going to Ireland. They tried to help him along but he wouldn't budge. The animated confab of the three on busy Twenty-third street and the unwillingness of the old man to do what the two younger men wanted him to do attracted a crowd at the hotel entrance. The crowd soon learned what it was all about and many advised the old man to go along with the lawyers. The crowd's advice fell on deaf ears.

Policeman Haugh took the two lawyers and Johnson to the Tenderloin station. The trio still had time to make the Campana, and they were hurried to Jefferson Market court.

There the case was explained to Magistrate Pool and the lawyers wanted to take their charge aboard the steamer. Magistrate Pool thought Johnson ought to have his sanity inquired into by the local authorities and sent him to Bellevue for safe keeping until Monday, when the Magistrate will hold an inquest on the old man's sanity without making the slightest protest. The two lawyers went back to the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

AQUEDUCT SUIT DISMISSED.

Pending Against the City, United. Since Engineer Fletley Was 84 Years Old.

The dismissal yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum of the suit of John C. Rodgers marked the end of an interesting phase of the city's varied litigation. It was the last of all the suits against the city arising out of the construction of the Aqueduct and had been pending for fifteen years. But so little progress was made in prosecuting the action that it had not got beyond the initial stage, and counsel for the plaintiffs were still pleading that they were not ready to go on with the trial. Corporation Counsel William P. Burr said to Justice Greenbaum that the plea was ridiculous, and on his motion the complaint was dismissed. It is very unlikely that it will be revived by an appeal from this judgment.

On Feb. 3, 1886, the Aqueduct Commissioners entered into a contract with John Brunton & Co. for certain work on the new Croton Aqueduct. Brunton & Co. sublet a large part of the work to John C. Rodgers, Edward Shanley and Edward F. Farrell of Rodgers, Shanley & Co., and this sub-contract was approved in 1888. When the work was completed, a bill for $1,320,386 was presented to the city, but only $1,094,201 was paid. This left a balance of $226,085, and with other unpaid items the total amount sued for was $241,582.

The action was put on the preferred calendar in 1890, an early trial being expected. W. Bourke Cockran was the first counsel for the plaintiffs. The city interposed a defense that its chief engineer, Alphonse Fletley, who is almost 70 now and very feeble, had certified that the work done by the plaintiffs was worth only what the city paid. Along in 1899, Rodgers, Shanley & Co. became counsel for the plaintiffs, and the suit was noticed for trial the next year. Last year the plaintiffs moved to amend the complaint so as to meet the city's defense, but this motion was lost on appeal, the courts refusing to allow the engineer's certificate to be attacked at so late a date.

Mr. Burr, since taking office this year, has had charge of the case, and has sought to compel the plaintiffs to bring the suit to trial, but without avail. When the case was called for trial he presented the state of affairs to the court and accused the plaintiffs of gross laches. Mr. Rodgers pleaded for more time, but Justice Greenbaum refused to listen to the plea and peremptorily dismissed the complaint.

RAILWAY TICKET A BLIND.

Man Who Bought One for St. Louis Arrested at Vera Cruz.

Police Headquarters got word yesterday of the arrest in Vera Cruz of Henry C. Close, who from July 1 until the end of September was employed by Folmer & Schwing, manufacturers of cameras and photographic supplies at 407 Broadway street. At Police Headquarters it was said that Close got away with nearly $10,000 worth of cameras and supplies and disposed of them for about $4,000. The specific complaint on which a warrant was issued was for the alleged larceny of the camera on Sept. 26. The police found that at the Grand Central Station Close had purchased a ticket for Mexico City via St. Louis. Later his employers got a telegram from him purporting to be sent from St. Louis. This, the police say, was only a blind, as Close had never gone to St. Louis or Mexico City, but had sailed for Vera Cruz on the Ward Line steamship Vigilance. He was arrested at once upon his arrival.

According to the information from Vera Cruz, Close was in company with a woman when arrested. The police say that he left his wife here in destitute circumstances.

Hardwood Clothes Pins
—Extra quality—3 dozen in a box; two lots only to each customer—a box of 3 doz. for (Base.)

ADAMS
DRY GOODS CO.
374 E. 22ND ST., NEW YORK

Gold Dust Washing Powder
—4-lb. package, a package...
2 packages for 25c.
None C. O. D.
Positively No Mail Orders.
(In the Basement.)

Monday's Stirring Sale of Women's Garments

At Prices Not to Be Duplicated in Any Store.

We devote almost an entire floor of this mammoth building to the sale of Women's and Misses' Wearing Apparel. It necessarily means the carrying of a very large stock, and this latter permits our making many special purchases that tend to save you considerable. To-morrow's news is thoroughly flavored with economy—and you may depend upon it every garment is exactly right as to style and making.

Women's $23.50 Suits, 14.98

Coat Suits of black and navy Etonian Cheviot, satin lined, trimmed with strap and belt, velvet collar and cuffs, braid trimmed, flared skirt, with pleat and straps.

Women's $27.50 Suits, 19.98

Coat Suits in black and white or navy and white mannish suiting; pleated effect, satin lined, neck and cuffs trimmed with velvet and fancy braid; new model pleated skirt.

Women's $30.00 Suits, 22.50

Coat Suits in black, brown and navy Lynxville Cheviot, fly front, semi-fitted coat, satin lined, velvet collar and cuffs, strapped, new model panel skirt, trimmed to match.

Women's $47.50 Suits, 35.00

Forty-two inch well tailored Coat Suits, in blue, brown and navy Lynxville Cheviot, lined with guaranteed satin; coat has stitched straps; skirt has a gorge, with pleat and strap to match coat.

Women's $18.00 Coats, 12.50

Black Cheviot, 1/2 fitting back; velvet collar; 28 inches long; satin lining.

Women's $25.00 Coats, 17.98

Tourist Coats of black broadcloth; 46 inches long; satin lining.

Women's $35.00 Coats, 27.50

New full pleated loose fitting collared model of English broadcloth; trimmed around neck with velvet and braid; also cuffs; satin lined.

Women's $10.50 Jackets, 7.50

Black Broadcloth, fly front, with notched collar; satin lined.

Women's $11.00 Jackets, 7.98

Tourist Coats of the covert, 40 inches long, loose back with belt; double breasted.

Women's $2.00 Waists, 1.25

Brilliant and fancy mixtures, in blue, brown, black or white; pleated blouse; fitted back; large full sleeves; separate skirt.

Women's $3.00 Waists, 1.98

Scotch Flannel, plain and fancy stripes; of blue, gray, red or tan; pleated front; fitted back; separate skirt and tie, also tailor made, with large box pleats; finished with double rows of stitching and fancy buttons; pleated back.

Ladies' White Bedford Cord Waists

pleated back and front, extra full blouse and sleeve, fancy separate stock; the entire waist finished with small white pearl buttons. Value $3.00; special at... $1.48

Women's $5.00 Waists, $3.50

Peau de Soie, front of cluster tucks and pleats; large, full blouse; tucked sleeves; fancy separate stock, with tie; all finished with fancy silk ornaments.

Women's $7.50 Waists, $5.98

Colored Taffeta Silk; two models; one in small box pleats, finished with double rows of stitching; new leg-of-mutton sleeves, with pleats and tucks; fancy separate stock, with stitching and tabs. Other model has front of shirring and stitched box pleats on blouse; tucked back; new French sleeves; separate stock and tie.

Women's $13.50 Skirts, $8.98

Dress Skirts of black French Broadcloth; new model flare, richly trimmed with straps of taffeta.

Women's $20 Skirts, $14.98

Dress Skirts of black Voile, trimmed with taffeta; made over fine silk drape.

Women's $8.50 Skirts, $5.98

Walking Skirts of black, navy or brown Kersey; flare with inverted pleats and straps.

Women's $14 Skirts, $9.50

Walking Skirts, Tulle cloth, in navy, brown and black; finely tailored, box pleats stitched and strapped.

Misses' $16.75 Suits, $12.98

Box coat style, 1/2 length; regulation effect; standing collar. Material is blue and brown cheviot; pleated skirt; sizes 14 to 18 years.

Misses' $23.50 Suits, $16.98

Made of blue, brown or black cheviot; long tourist coat, 40 inch; also new mixtures with velvet trimming, collared and velvet cuffs; pleated skirt; sizes 14 to 18.

Girls' $5.00 Suits, $2.98

Sailor suits and fancy dresses; made of black and white cheviot; also cheviot; some have large sailor collars; various styles; sizes 6 to 14.

Girls' $8.50 Box Coats, $6.98

Also regulation reefers with emblems on sleeve; length and short styles; some lined with red flannel; sizes 6 to 14 years.

More Black Goods Specials

At a Saving of a Third to a Half.

We are maintaining our Dress Goods supremacy by the same old method—a method that saves you the most money on whatever you wish to buy. Last Monday broke all records in sales of Black Goods. To-morrow's specials are fully as important.

75c

54-in. all wool, glossy finish Zibeline.

45-in. all wool imported Nun's

selling by the Twenty-third street entrance. Just outside the hotel Johnson balked.

"Where are we going now?" he asked.

"Why, we're going to Ireland to get the money," said his guardian.

"Ireland," said the old man, "am I going to Ireland?"

"You certainly are," chorused the two lawyers.

"I'm not," said the old man, stubbornly.

The lawyers coaxed him and tried to treat him to accompany them. They showed him the steamer tickets and explained to him again why he was going to Ireland. They tried to help him along but he wouldn't budge. The animated confab of the three on busy Twenty-third street and the unwillingness of the old man to do what the two younger men wanted him to do attracted a crowd at the hotel entrance. The crowd soon learned what it was all about and many advised the old man to go along with the lawyers. The crowd's advice fell on deaf ears.

Policeman Haugh took the two lawyers and Johnson to the Tenderloin station. The trio still had time to make the Campana, and they were hurried to Jefferson Market court.

There the case was explained to Magistrate Pool and the lawyers wanted to take their charge aboard the steamer. Magistrate Pool thought Johnson ought to have his sanity inquired into by the local authorities and sent him to Bellevue for safe keeping until Monday, when the Magistrate will hold an inquest on the old man's sanity without making the slightest protest. The two lawyers went back to the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

AQUEDUCT SUIT DISMISSED.

Pending Against the City, United. Since Engineer Fletley Was 84 Years Old.

The dismissal yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum of the suit of John C. Rodgers marked the end of an interesting phase of the city's varied litigation. It was the last of all the suits against the city arising out of the construction of the Aqueduct and had been pending for fifteen years. But so little progress was made in prosecuting the action that it had not got beyond the initial stage, and counsel for the plaintiffs were still pleading that they were not ready to go on with the trial. Corporation Counsel William P. Burr said to Justice Greenbaum that the plea was ridiculous, and on his motion the complaint was dismissed. It is very unlikely that it will be revived by an appeal from this judgment.

On Feb. 3, 1886, the Aqueduct Commissioners entered into a contract with John Brunton & Co. for certain work on the new Croton Aqueduct. Brunton & Co. sublet a large part of the work to John C. Rodgers, Edward Shanley and Edward F. Farrell of Rodgers, Shanley & Co., and this sub-contract was approved in 1888. When the work was completed, a bill for $1,320,386 was presented to the city, but only $1,094,201 was paid. This left a balance of $226,085, and with other unpaid items the total amount sued for was $241,582.

The action was put on the preferred calendar in 1890, an early trial being expected. W. Bourke Cockran was the first counsel for the plaintiffs. The city interposed a defense that its chief engineer, Alphonse Fletley, who is almost 70 now and very feeble, had certified that the work done by the plaintiffs was worth only what the city paid. Along in 1899, Rodgers, Shanley & Co. became counsel for the plaintiffs, and the suit was noticed for trial the next year. Last year the plaintiffs moved to amend the complaint so as to meet the city's defense, but this motion was lost on appeal, the courts refusing to allow the engineer's certificate to be attacked at so late a date.

Mr. Burr, since taking office this year, has had charge of the case, and has sought to compel the plaintiffs to bring the suit to trial, but without avail. When the case was called for trial he presented the state of affairs to the court and accused the plaintiffs of gross laches. Mr. Rodgers pleaded for more time, but Justice Greenbaum refused to listen to the plea and peremptorily dismissed the complaint.

RAILWAY TICKET A BLIND.

Man Who Bought One for St. Louis Arrested at Vera Cruz.

Police Headquarters got word yesterday of the arrest in Vera Cruz of Henry C. Close, who from July 1 until the end of September was employed by Folmer & Schwing, manufacturers of cameras and photographic supplies at 407 Broadway street. At Police Headquarters it was said that Close got away with nearly $10,000 worth of cameras and supplies and disposed of them for about $4,000. The specific complaint on which a warrant was issued was for the alleged larceny of the camera on Sept. 26. The police found that at the Grand Central Station Close had purchased a ticket for Mexico City via St. Louis. Later his employers got a telegram from him purporting to be sent from St. Louis. This, the police say, was only a blind, as Close had never gone to St. Louis or Mexico City, but had sailed for Vera Cruz on the Ward Line steamship Vigilance. He was arrested at once upon his arrival.

According to the information from Vera Cruz, Close was in company with a woman when arrested. The police say that he left his wife here in destitute circumstances.

49c

54-in. all wool, glossy finish Zibeline.

45-in. all wool imported Nun's

selling by the Twenty-third street entrance. Just outside the hotel Johnson balked.

"Where are we going now?" he asked.

"Why, we're going to Ireland to get the money," said his guardian.

"Ireland," said the old man, "am I going to Ireland?"

"You certainly are," chorused the two lawyers.

"I'm not," said the old man, stubbornly.

The lawyers coaxed him and tried to treat him to accompany them. They showed him the steamer tickets and explained to him again why he was going to Ireland. They tried to help him along but he wouldn't budge. The animated confab of the three on busy Twenty-third street and the unwillingness of the old man to do what the two younger men wanted him to do attracted a crowd at the hotel entrance. The crowd soon learned what it was all about and many advised the old man to go along with the lawyers. The crowd's advice fell on deaf ears.

Policeman Haugh took the two lawyers and Johnson to the Tenderloin station. The trio still had time to make the Campana, and they were hurried to Jefferson Market court.

There the case was explained to Magistrate Pool and the lawyers wanted to take their charge aboard the steamer. Magistrate Pool thought Johnson ought to have his sanity inquired into by the local authorities and sent him to Bellevue for safe keeping until Monday, when the Magistrate will hold an inquest on the old man's sanity without making the slightest protest. The two lawyers went back to the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

AQUEDUCT SUIT DISMISSED.

Pending Against the City, United. Since Engineer Fletley Was 84 Years Old.

The dismissal yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum of the suit of John C. Rodgers marked the end of an interesting phase of the city's varied litigation. It was the last of all the suits against the city arising out of the construction of the Aqueduct and had been pending for fifteen years. But so little progress was made in prosecuting the action that it had not got beyond the initial stage, and counsel for the plaintiffs were still pleading that they were not ready to go on with the trial. Corporation Counsel William P. Burr said to Justice Greenbaum that the plea was ridiculous, and on his motion the complaint was dismissed. It is very unlikely that it will be revived by an appeal from this judgment.

On Feb. 3, 1886, the Aqueduct Commissioners entered into a contract with John Brunton & Co. for certain work on the new Croton Aqueduct. Brunton & Co. sublet a large part of the work to John C. Rodgers, Edward Shanley and Edward F. Farrell of Rodgers, Shanley & Co., and this sub-contract was approved in 1888. When the work was completed, a bill for $1,320,386 was presented to the city, but only $1,094,201 was paid. This left a balance of $226,085, and with other unpaid items the total amount sued for was $241,582.

The action was put on the preferred calendar in 1890, an early trial being expected. W. Bourke Cockran was the first counsel for the plaintiffs. The city interposed a defense that its chief engineer, Alphonse Fletley, who is almost 70 now and very feeble, had certified that the work done by the plaintiffs was worth only what the city paid. Along in 1899, Rodgers, Shanley & Co. became counsel for the plaintiffs, and the suit was noticed for trial the next year. Last year the plaintiffs moved to amend the complaint so as to meet the city's defense, but this motion was lost on appeal, the courts refusing to allow the engineer's certificate to be attacked at so late a date.

Mr. Burr, since taking office this year, has had charge of the case, and has sought to compel the plaintiffs to bring the suit to trial, but without avail. When the case was called for trial he presented the state of affairs to the court and accused the plaintiffs of gross laches. Mr. Rodgers pleaded for more time, but Justice Greenbaum refused to listen to the plea and peremptorily dismissed the complaint.

RAILWAY TICKET A BLIND.

Man Who Bought One for St. Louis Arrested at Vera Cruz.

Police Headquarters got word yesterday of the arrest in Vera Cruz of Henry C. Close, who from July 1 until the end of September was employed by Folmer & Schwing, manufacturers of cameras and photographic supplies at 407 Broadway street. At Police Headquarters it was said that Close got away with nearly $10,000 worth of cameras and supplies and disposed of them for about $4,000. The specific complaint on which a warrant was issued was for the alleged larceny of the camera on Sept. 26. The police found that at the Grand Central Station Close had purchased a ticket for Mexico City via St. Louis. Later his employers got a telegram from him purporting to be sent from St. Louis. This, the police say, was only a blind, as Close had never gone to St. Louis or Mexico City, but had sailed for Vera Cruz on the Ward Line steamship Vigilance. He was arrested at once upon his arrival.

According to the information from Vera Cruz, Close was in company with a woman when arrested. The police say that he left his wife here in destitute circumstances.

50c to 75c Dress Goods at 39c

In this remarkable offering are included:—All Wool Granite Cloths, All Wool Voiles, All Wool Etamine, All Wool Homespun Cheviots, All Wool Henriettes, All Wool Nun's Vellings, and many other weaves in great variety of colors, and qualities are as good as you will get elsewhere for from 50c. to 75c.

75c

54-in. all wool, glossy finish Zibeline.

45-in. all wool imported Nun's

selling by the Twenty-third street entrance. Just outside the hotel Johnson balked.

"Where are we going now?" he asked.

"Why, we're going to Ireland to get the money," said his guardian.

"Ireland," said the old man, "am I going to Ireland?"

"You certainly are," chorused the two lawyers.

"I'm not," said the old man, stubbornly.

The lawyers coaxed him and tried to treat him to accompany them. They showed him the steamer tickets and explained to him again why he was going to Ireland. They tried to help him along but he wouldn't budge. The animated confab of the three on busy Twenty-third street and the unwillingness of the old man to do what the two younger men wanted him to do attracted a crowd at the hotel entrance. The crowd soon learned what it was all about and many advised the old man to go along with the lawyers. The crowd's advice fell on deaf ears.

Policeman Haugh took the two lawyers and Johnson to the Tenderloin station. The trio still had time to make the Campana, and they were hurried to Jefferson Market court.

There the case was explained to Magistrate Pool and the lawyers wanted to take their charge aboard the steamer. Magistrate Pool thought Johnson ought to have his sanity inquired into by the local authorities and sent him to Bellevue for safe keeping until Monday, when the Magistrate will hold an inquest on the old man's sanity without making the slightest protest. The two lawyers went back to the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

AQUEDUCT SUIT DISMISSED.

Pending Against the City, United. Since Engineer Fletley Was 84 Years Old.

The dismissal yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum of the suit of John C. Rodgers marked the end of an interesting phase of the city's varied litigation. It was the last of all the suits against the city arising out of the construction of the Aqueduct and had been pending for fifteen years. But so little progress was made in prosecuting the action that it had not got beyond the initial stage, and counsel for the plaintiffs were still pleading that they were not ready to go on with the trial. Corporation Counsel William P. Burr said to Justice Greenbaum that the plea was ridiculous, and on his motion the complaint was dismissed. It is very unlikely that it will be revived by an appeal from this judgment.

On Feb. 3, 1886, the Aqueduct Commissioners entered into a contract with John Brunton & Co. for certain work on the new Croton Aqueduct. Brunton & Co. sublet a large part of the work to John C. Rodgers, Edward Shanley and Edward F. Farrell of Rodgers, Shanley & Co., and this sub-contract was approved in 1888. When the work was completed, a bill for $1,320,386 was presented to the city, but only $1,094,201 was paid. This left a balance of $226,085, and with other unpaid items the total amount sued for was $241,582.

The action was put on the preferred calendar in 1890, an early trial being expected. W. Bourke Cockran was the first counsel for the plaintiffs. The city interposed a defense that its chief engineer, Alphonse Fletley, who is almost 70 now and very feeble, had certified that the work done by the plaintiffs was worth only what the city paid. Along in 1899, Rodgers, Shanley & Co. became counsel for the plaintiffs, and the suit was noticed for trial the next year. Last year the plaintiffs moved to amend the complaint so as to meet the city's defense, but this motion was lost on appeal, the courts refusing to allow the engineer's certificate to be attacked at so late a date.

Mr. Burr, since taking office this year, has had charge of the case, and has sought to compel the plaintiffs to bring the suit to trial, but without avail. When the case was called for trial he presented the state of affairs to the court and accused the plaintiffs of gross laches. Mr. Rodgers pleaded for more time, but Justice Greenbaum refused to listen to the plea and peremptorily dismissed the complaint.

RAILWAY TICKET A BLIND.

Man Who Bought One for St. Louis Arrested at Vera Cruz.

Police Headquarters got word yesterday of the arrest in Vera Cruz of Henry C. Close, who from July 1 until the end of September was employed by Folmer & Schwing, manufacturers of cameras and photographic supplies at 407 Broadway street. At Police Headquarters it was said that Close got away with nearly $10,000 worth of cameras and supplies and disposed of them for about $4,000. The specific complaint on which a warrant was issued was for the alleged larceny of the camera on Sept. 26. The police found that at the Grand Central Station Close had purchased a ticket for Mexico City via St. Louis. Later his employers got a telegram from him purporting to be sent from St. Louis. This, the police say, was only a blind, as Close had never gone to St. Louis or Mexico City, but had sailed for Vera Cruz on the Ward Line steamship Vigilance. He was arrested at once upon his arrival.

49c

54-in. all wool, glossy finish Zibeline.

45-in. all wool imported Nun's

selling by the Twenty-third street entrance. Just outside the hotel Johnson balked.

"Where are we going now?" he asked.

"Why, we're going to Ireland to get the money," said his guardian.

"Ireland," said the old man, "am I going to Ireland?"